INTRODUCTION TO SANTA FE

The city was incorporated in 1891 as a body politic and corporate under the laws of the state and is the county seat and capital of the state. The city is situated in the foothills of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains (Rocky Mountain Range) at 7,000 feet elevation and is located approximately 380 miles south of Denver at the junction of Interstate 25 and U.S. Highways 64, 84 and 285.

The Santa Fe economy is diversified with government, tourist, retail trade and industry being predominate. The state is the largest employer in the city. State and federal offices plus the county and city offices combine to make the city the governmental center of the state. The central business district and shopping centers contain about 450 businesses. There are over 150 art galleries and dealers and over 45 antique dealers in the city in addition to art markets on the Plaza. It is the second largest financial center in the state with seven commercial banks and three savings and loan associations.

The city has a unique culture because of the proximity of numerous Pueblo Indian villages. Indian pottery, weaving, silver and turquoise jewelry, Spanish wood carving and weaving, paintings, glass and a complete range of contemporary arts and crafts are produced and sold. Popular tourist attractions in the city include the oldest church and the oldest house in the United States; numerous buildings listed in the state register of Historic Sites and Property; the oldest public building in the U.S.; the Plaza, which was the end of the Camino Real and Santa Fe Trail; and numerous museums and landmarks including the Museum of Fine Arts, Museum of International Folk Art, Wheelright Museum, Institute of American Indian Arts Museum, and the Palace of the Governors. The Santa Fe Ski Basin and Santa Fe Opera are near the city. The city is a popular on-location site for both television and motion picture filming crews including two western town movie sets nearby. The Laboratory of Anthropology is also located in the city and is a research center that has conducted more than 14,000 archaeological investigations.

A large segment of the city is controlled by historical zoning ordinances designed to maintain the Spanish architecture in the city. Numerous national, regional and state conventions are held in the city annually. Fiesta de Santa Fe is the oldest continuous community celebration in the United States commemorating the return of the city to Spanish rule.

Both the College of Santa Fe and St. John's College are four year institutions of higher learning. The Santa Fe Community College is a two-year institution of higher learning. The New Mexico School for the Deaf and the Institute of American Indian Arts are also located in the city. There are three newspapers, including two daily newspapers, several radio stations and cable television serving the city.

Administration and City Government

The administrative offices of the city are located at 200 Lincoln Avenue, Santa Fe, New Mexico. The city operates under a Mayor-Council/City Manager form of government and is governed by the City Council which is comprised of eight councilors and the mayor. The eight councilors are elected for staggered four-year terms.
